September 24, 1983, P.4 at the time, and there were other people working nearly but the noise lead was such that John and I were howing a very private conversation in the midst of a group of people. It was very beautiful indeed. It had all of the intensity of a conversation on a battlefield. at the conclusion of our fine-minute conversation on the subject of John's fellings about not becoming a tool and die maker, John and I were both feeling very good and that was very special. Good friends helping each other through definet moments or periode. One invariably feels l'intensely "aline" at such moments. When we armed at the plant, I was thinking that we would pay a 30- minute visit, but, as it turn out, we stayed for about 21/2-3 bre. John was in a mood where he wanted to be surrounded by machiner. He has sail on more twon on occasion that bei father has told him that he will break both of his arms before he will allow John to work at fendruk'r, by which the father means that John u Capable of more. Suring our busit, the "dinner bell "Sounded and we went out to the parking lat where Connie and Kathy were waiting in the ban with Jack's supper. We all visited while Jack ate What an unusual experience it was I was ready to leave when the dunner hour war over, but John suggested we go back in, and so in we went. I was introduced & Jack's begane beiger - - & can not recall the man's name at present but I must say that he is very strange. he man is suffering from some specier of paranoia. Persecution against him and his parantrand grandparents - - largely imaginary persecution of arm Juste sure. He speake of "twen" ar the persecution but well not identify his antecedent of asked. He compulsively reads trade magaziner (mechanial lugineering and metal workering and popular science) and copies much of What he reads into lier "journal." He writer whenever he gete a chance, all the Tobule that be works. He is up to page 519 in hu present apris: blue ballpoint pen on 5×10" paper with lever on it. Very carefully written. He has apparently written other things, including one "open" that he sent aff to some unwersity. On I chatter tous the man, he repentedly said: "Mi i very complicated and in something that really should be looked into. I don't have the time, maybe you do." I finally came out and asked him "What is complicated" and he did not answer
